Coordinated by the Center for Women and Work

The science and technology sector is a major driver of New Jersey's economy. This summit will gather representatives of education, government & policy making, industry and community organizations to answer the questions:

How do we strengthen this critical sector by boosting women's interest and participation?

What programs and policies are in place for women in this sector?

What are educators, business, government and community organizations doing to increase women's participation and success?

What are best practices?

Featured keynote speaker is Dr. Nancy Snyderman, health correspondent for NBC News, former Vice President at Johnson & Johnson, and a member of the head and neck surgical team at the University of Pennsylvania.

Leaders of government, business, labor, education and community will also participate, including: Jane Oates, NJ Commission on Higher Education; Marilyn Davis, Labor and Workforce Development; Angie McGuire, Office of Economic Development; Michelle Tortolani, Society of Women Engineers; and Pamela Stone, author of "Opting out? Why Women Really Quit Careers and Head Home."

Workshops will include:

Work/Life Balance

Mentoring

Perspectives on Career Paths

Cultural & Media Perceptions

Recruitment and Retention

RUTGERS
